

JEREZ-XÉRÈS-SHERRY

The Jerez wine region is located in the extreme south of the Iberian Peninsula in Spain's Andalucía area. Only wines produced in the Jerez region in accordance with specific, traditional processes can be called Sherry. The wines are matured for long periods using traditional methods, including the dynamic "solera" system, resulting in an enormous variety of styles.

Region

7,000 hectares growing area

Production

65 million kilos produced annually

55 million bottles shipped

70% of wines exported generating $106 million

People

2,000 growers

7 cooperatives

100 wineries

Impact

1,500 winery jobs

2,000 growers

10,000 indirect jobs

570,000 tourist visitors (2019)

Primary Grape Varietals

Palomino | Moscatel | Pedro Ximénez

For more information, visit www.sherry.org or follow @SherryWines on Twitter and Facebook.

